MIDDIES' NUMBERS MAY BE INCREASED
New Act Would Make Enrollment of Academy 1,750.
ANAPOLIS, Feb. 11.—Officials estimate there will be about 1,350 midshipmen at the Naval Academy at the beginning of the next academic year. Should the proposed law providing for an additional appointment for each United States Senator and Representative become a law, the number would not be less than 1,750.
There was something more than 1,200 midshipmen here at the beginning of the present term, which was by far the largest number ever in the institution. For the half-dozen years just preceding the average number was between 800 and 900, and up to twenty years ago the normal number was about 300.
The actual number of midshipmen now in the Academy is 1,149, after the seventy-two who have just resigned are deducted. There are 183 in the first class, which will graduate in June unless the regular order is disturbed. Officials estimate the new fourth class will contain about 450 members, if assembled under the present law, or 850 if the additional appointments are allowed. The present fourth class had a little more than 600 members when it began the academic year, and was by far the largest class which had ever entered the institution.
It is probable the authorities can make some temporary provision to house the increased number of midshipmen if it does not reach about 1,350, but it is certainly some temporary quarters must be provided if the number is increased through the means of new legislation. An item in the naval bill calls for an appropriation of $1,200,000 to construct additional barracks.

Berg Esenwein, an authority on short story writing, will be given before the league at the Raleigh last night, will be given before the students of the J. O. Wilson Normal School at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

LAWS UNCHANGED BY U-BOATS' WARFARE
Rights Cannot Be Abridged By Invention of Weapon, Declares Temple.
WASHINGTON KEPT TODAY AS BIRTHDAY
Change In Calendar Moved Celebration Up to February Twenty-two.
Although Washington's Birthday is celebrated in most parts of the country on February 22, it is interesting to recall that for many years his neighbors and their descendants celebrated his birthday in old Alexandria on February 11. Therefore, today (February 11), is really Washington's birthday, and if there were any whose memory harked back to the old style calendar they would be holding the celebration now.
The discrepancy of the dates is explained by Paul Willstach in his book, "Mt. Vernon, Washington's Home and the Nation's Shrine" (Doubleday, Page & Co.), where he says:
"In February he was the guest of the citizens of Alexandria for their customary celebration of his birthday. Many maneuvers were performed by the uniform corps—and an elegant ball and supper at night. Mr. Temple, who spoke late yesterday, 'There has been no modification of international law because of the invention of a new weapon. The submarine has no more privileges than any other attacking vessel.'
Law Stands Unchanged.
"It cannot be pleaded that international law has been changed simply because you are using a new method of attack. Suppose I were accused of murder and I made a plea that I committed the murder with a poison that had not been invented when the law against murder was passed. Would that justify me in committing murder?
"The argument would be just as sound as to claim that because of the invention of the submarine all international law has been changed. There is no soundness in such a contention and the law of the sea is the same as it has always been."
Congressman Temple evoked generous applause when he declared that there should never be an attack upon noncombatants. You have no more right to attack women and children at sea than you have on land."
Granted More Time.
The House was so interested in the analysis of international law by Mr. Temple that when his allotted five minutes expired there were requests from both the Democratic and Republican sides that his time be extended. This was granted.
Mr. Temple's speech was preceded by a verbal tilt between Congressman J. Hampton Moore, Republican of Pennsylvania, and Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, Republican of Massachusetts. Mr. Moore evoked the wrath when he said:
"Unlike the gentleman from Massachusetts, I do not think we should be so easily broken off relations. I don't think any such thing; I have never said it."
"You have said it in your speeches right in the House," shouted Mr. Moore.
Denies the Allegation.
"I haven't done any such thing. I deny the statement."
"Everybody knows the gentleman has certain Anglo-maniac ideas," exclaimed Mr. Moore. "He has made a number of speeches here attacking Germany."
"Yes, I shall do so again," rejoined Mr. Gardner, "but I am not trying to bring the country into war, and have not urged a declaration of war."
The entire discussion was incident to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill and debate relative to the value of the submarine as an offensive and defensive weapon as shown by Germany's use of that undersea craft.
MISSISSIPPIANS BANQUET
Spirit of Andrew Jackson Still Reigns, Says Speaker.
The spirit which 100 years ago carried the United States to victory under the leadership of Andrew Jackson will save the United States today, said Congressman Humphreys, of Mississippi, at the banquet of that State's society in the Ebbitt Hotel last night.
The banquet was in celebration of the 100th anniversary of Mississippi as a State. Congressman Oscar Gray of Alabama, former Senator from Texas, and others were among the speakers.
Former Senator Bailey expressed the thought that should war come with Germany, the German-Americans in the United States will be "loyal to the country of their adoption in any time of stress."
